RADIO:

Songs from the Golden One will be worked to commercial and non-commercial/college radio.

When asked to describe himself, Whitmer Thomas—comic, musician, skateboarder, infamous Blink182 fan—will tell you, “I’m always gonna be the one whose mom called him ‘the Golden One,’ right before she died.” This is where his debut HBO comedy special, The Golden One, finds Whitmer: age thirty, investigating this sense (curse?) of destiny-as-identity. It’s been thirteen years since he left Alabama for LA, becoming a linchpin for LA’s young, independent comedy scene with Power Violence, the monthly show he hosted with friends. But he became haunted by the question: had he already peaked, just like his mom, singer in a local band with big ambitions that never made it out of the Flora-Bama Lounge in Gulf Shores? Rather than shy away from all that messy self-mythology, Whitmer tapped the source of it all through writing this one-man show featuring his own original music. Songs from The Golden One, a companion album of songs from the special, features Whitmer’s darkwave bangers, synthesizing relatable content: millennial anxieties, therapy-speak jokes, and the annals of his own childhood tragedies.

Songs from The Golden One feature ten cuts of borderline-John Maus cosplay with spasms of pop-punk absurdity. Thomas uses the gothy, nasal vocal drone as a tool of comic detachment to cover the funny-‘cause-its-true territory of awkward sex, crippling insecurity, the shame of ambition, and the long tail of abandonment traumas. Each song is a capsule of initial therapy breakthroughs: those realization zingers where suddenly it all makes sense how each fucked variable from then makes up the weird shit of now. When you see it all for what it is, it looks like some sick, clever joke from the universe, driving you desperate to revise the comedy so that if you have to be reality’s punchline, at least you can write the jokes.

Original tracks from the special include the shimmering, synthy euphoria of “Eat You Out,” a glorious admission to performance anxiety and the ol’ magician’s cloak of cunninglingus move. There’s “The Codependent Enabler,” a whole jungle gym of toxic relationship rationale where “I can only get it up if you are down,” and the sadboy sobriety anthem “Partied to Death,” about when you’re young in LA and you have to tell people that you’re not “Cali sober for wellness,” you’re sober because your mom actually died from addiction.

At first pass, Whitmer’s special and album make a relevant, hilarious articulation of one tragic childhood, of the messiness of masculinity, of the timeless qualms of being broke with a dream in Los Angeles, and the humiliation inherent in having “a dream” at all. But in flashes of unexpected weirdo wisdom, Whitmer weaves a deeper story of a person finding reconciliation and forgiveness while finding his own self and voice. He faces his darkness with darkwave, writing the story of his objectively insane youth through a Venn diagram of cool guy music, goofy dude jokes, and sensitive boy reflections that hit in a way that feels bigger than the sum of its parts. Whitmer will say that he made The Golden One out of desperation, but there’s something about it that feels a lot more like destiny.

KEY SELLING POINTS

- Previously unissued live performance from folk icon.
- Over 60 minutes of covers and standards presented in Goodman's inimitable style.
- New liner notes from the show's original recording engineer, Chicago folk-radio staple, Rich Warren

Before Steve Goodman landed a record deal in 1971, and a few years before his classic "City Of New Orleans" became a modern folk standard, he was already a seasoned live performer throughout his hometown of Chicago and surrounding areas. His brilliant songwriting and musicianship, coupled with his engaging on-stage personality and distinctive performance style, made him a favorite of anyone who caught a live show.

In 1969, University of Illinois student Rich Warren hosted his own folk-music program called Changes, modeled after WFMT's classic The Midnight Special. He was a fan of Goodman's work, and booked a show at the school's Auditorium, headlined by Steve. Warren also brought a Tandberg 64X tape deck with two Shure ribbon mikes, an AKG 202E mike and a primitive Shure mixer along to capture the performance. Over five decades later, this influential performance finally sees the light of day.

Live '69 captures Goodman as his star was rising in the folk scene, and is notable because the show was comprised of 12 wide-ranging covers—from standards to songs by Willie Dixon, Merle Haggard, and Bob Dylan, to a four-song medley including songs by The Beatles and Jefferson Airplane, it's a unique show in Steve Goodman's recorded body of work.

As Warren states in his liner notes: "I've been involved with folk radio for 50 years, and have recorded hundreds of artists. I've rarely seen anyone with the energy, vibrancy, vast repertoire and crowd pleasing ability as Steve Goodman. This recording proves that even before he composed 'City Of New Orleans' he owned the stage"

DESCRIPTION:

Before the night is through, AD INFINITUM presents your favorite worst nightmare with their smashing debut Chapter I: Monarchy. The unpolished and equally magnificent diamond grabs the demon by the horns: Energetic, straight forward, uncompromising Symphonic Metal along with a rousing journey through the history. Escaping the Black Death and being transported to another era – “Marching on Versailles” breaks the chains with smashing drums and forceful guitar riffs. Melissa Bonny’s multi-faceted voice fills every fiber of the hymn “Demons” - from powerful, fragile heights to deep growls and will send ecstatic shivers down your spine. The energetic and equally melodic soundscapes of the vigorous ballade “Fire and Ice” offers the heart-rending facet of AD INFINITUM. Where others still lose themselves in colorful descriptions, AD INFINITUM has already put a spell on the world and is heading right into the heart of epic Symphonic Metal with full force.

MELKBELLY

PITH

Melkbelly sculpts their signature balance between subtle melody and frantic noise on new album PITH, their second for Carpark Records/Wax Nine. The Chicago-based foursome has made spatial dynamics central to its arrangements, reaching for weirder highs and more startling atmospherics, negative space giving way to enveloping walls of chaos. This sense of form is reflected not only in the purposeful production, but in the ceramic cover art created by Chicago artist Deborah Handler.

Recording in two short sessions six months apart, the band worked with longtime collaborator Dave Vettrano, this time at Bloomington, Indiana's Russian Recording. Alongside an arsenal of rock gear and airy synth layers coaxed from a Moog Prodigy, PITH's multidimensionality was refined by the studio's collection of rare Russian tube mics, which were placed in every corner to capture Melkbelly's unabashed loudness. Frontperson Miranda Winters' charmingly bright vocals are newly effected, delayed to a menacing, mysterious thickness. Guitars, handled by Miranda and Bart Winters, interlock and separate with dizzying ease, riffs dissolving into floating trails and reappearing with metallic edges. Bassist Liam Winters' low grooves bounce and kick along with drummer James Wetzel's rhythmically unsettling performance, which stretches time yet never falters.

After two years touring internationally, the band felt comfortable enough to rearrange songs they knew well, their renewed closeness guiding them. Their literally familial relationship was crucial for support, as PITH was summoned from a place of mourning. "We lost an incredible friend suddenly and nostalgia always acts as a helpful tool for me in navigating difficult times," Miranda says. "Revisiting emotionally challenging moments or significant social interactions helps shed light on confusing feelings for me. Lyrically, grief gave way to considering life," she elaborates. Considering life is exactly right, as Miranda also attributes inspiration to her pregnancy throughout the recording process. Consequently, she drew from diverse scenes—Grimm-like children's stories too dark for kids; thorny, mossy forests—to create stories that feel distinctly Melkbellian: philosophically strange, strikingly textural, funny and sad and open-hearted.

Maturation, as well as their DIY reverence, can be heard on the tempo-shifting "Sickeningly Teeth." It's an homage to "feel[ing] like shit really loudly or obnoxiously. You know, in an unapologetic youthful way," deadpans Miranda. James describes it as a "rhythmic exploration to make the song feel like it's pulling itself apart." Follow-up single "LCR" similarly shapes PITH's dynamics and mood. Its shifting signatures held steady by James' frantic beat, the track is a purgatorial homage to motion, ultimately propelled by its tangled guitars and layered vocal harmonies. "It's about how having conversations with the dead can scoot you along in life, even when you're really only hearing one side of the conversation or making up the other half," says Miranda.

Since their 2017 debut Nothing Valley, the members of Melkbelly have an even better understanding of their sonic motivations. "We're always going to sort through the past to make better sense of the present," Miranda says, and in doing so Melkbelly continually finds ways to mutate its sound. On PITH, Melkbelly sought space, and succeeded in crafting it. What a pleasure to be let in.

DAVE BICKLER

DARKLIGHT

For fans of Survivor & classic rock!

Grammy award winning vocalist Dave Bickler is about to release his first ever solo record "Darklight". A collection of songs very personal to Dave and including a backing band consisting of drummer Ryan Hoyle (Collective Soul, Paul Rodgers), bassist Brad Smith (Blind Melon), and guitarist Stephen DeAcutis (Cozy Glover, Appice Brothers).

Dave Bickler started his musical career as lead singer of 1970s rock group Jamestown Massacre (Billboard #1 song "Summer Sun") but is best known as the vocalist for the Grammy Award winning rock band Survivor singing on their massive #1 hit "Eye of the Tiger". The song went on to be one of the most downloaded songs and propelled Dave's career when Sylvester Stallone wanted the song featured in the 1982 blockbuster movie Rocky III.

The song won Dave a Grammy Award for Best Rock Performance by A Duo or Group with Vocal. It was voted "Best New Song" by the People's Choice Awards, received an Academy Award nomination, came in at #18 on the "Top 100 Singles" chart in Billboard's 100th Anniversary issue

From 1999-2009, Dave was the singing voice behind the highly successful (most award-winning radio campaign in advertising history!) 'Real Men of Genius' Bud Light radio and TV commercials, including promotional events where he sang live spots and the National Anthem at major sporting events across the country.

"Darklight" will be issued on CD and Vinyl. The Vinyl will be available in both Standard (black) and Limited (gray swirl), and both will include a download card with a bonus track exclusive to the vinyl release.

DESCRIPTION:

Emerging from dusky woods, the untamed and forlorn nature of Finnish quartet WOLFHEART leads them to one of the most picturesque regions of their home country, Karelia. Just as wildlife itself maintains harmony through a violent clash of the beautiful and unpredictable, Wolves of Karelia explores the previously coined genre of winter metal - smoothly connecting a traditional approach towards extreme genres ('Reaper') with atmospheric or acoustic details ('the Hammer', 'Horizon on Fire'), crowned by the instrumental interlude, 'Eye of the Storm'. With the noted complexity of their fifth album, WOLFHEART master the art of sonic storytelling through eight multi-faceted stylistic epics with a virtuosity of riffs, guitar solos, and abrupt tempo-changes. Above all, however, Wolves of Karelia attack with complex arrangements and melodically-grasped melancholy, creating a release as bewitching and intense as it is atmospherically resonant.

GLADIATORS

Serious Thing

Among the great things that I remember about these sessions were the superb players and singers who just showed up. Richard Ace had been living in England, but dropped in while on vacation in Jamaica and contributed great keyboards to three selections. The Ethiopian showed up and agreed to cut four songs backed by the Gladiators. Joseph Hill, lead singer of Culture, sat in the control room with Sylvan and I for an hour and told me that the Gladiators were his favorite group. The additional highlight of these sessions was watching Sylvan mixing top ranking dub tracks of the Gladiators best riddims. Serious Thing includes a generous portion of these superb dubs.

—Leroy Jodie Pierson
From the liner notes to Serious Thing

Albert Griffiths founded the Gladiators in 1966 after some success on his own. The group scored their first hit, produced by legendary producer Coxsone Dodd, with "Hello Carol" in 1968. During the '70s the Gladiators made their way through releases on labels like Studio One, Upsetter, Virgin and Groovemaster. 1980 found the Gladiators working with producer, and pre-"Electric Avenue" hitmaker, Eddy Grant on the album Gladiators, which also featured members of the band Aswad lending a musical hand.

After 1982's Symbol Of Reality, their first for the Nighthawk Records label, the Gladiators added more cultural commentary in their song choices for 1984's follow up, Serious Thing. Topical songs dominate the album from the title track, "Serious Thing" to "Freedom Train" and "My Thoughts." Once again, they revisited their own catalog of songs, re-recording, "Rearrange" (originally cut with Coxsone Dodd in the early '70s) and "Fling It Gimme" (originally a single for the group dating back to 1969). Even though reggae as a style of music was changing in the mid-'80s, the Gladiators played to their strengths and made another classic roots album.

This newly remastered version of the album features the original LP's ten tracks in a beautiful gatefold jacket. Lyrics and liner notes from original Nighthawk Records' producer Leroy Jodie Pierson are also included. Like all of the Nighthawk reissues, this has been overseen by Leroy and Grammy® Award-winning producer, Cheryl Pawelski, and has been remastered from the original tapes by Grammy® Award-winning engineer, Michael Graves, and lacquers cut by Jeff Powell at Take Out Vinyl/Sam Phillips Recording Service in Memphis, Tennessee.

WAYWARD DAWN

HAVEN OF LIES

WITH THE RELEASE OF THEIR CRITICALLY ACCLAIMED DEBUT ALBUM "SOIL ORGANIC MATTER" IN 2018 AND MORE THAN 40 GIGS IN DENMARK AND GERMANY, YOUNG DEATH METAL ACT WAYWARD DAWN FROM SKANDERBORG, DENMARK HAVE SLOWLY BUT SURELY CRAWLED THEIR WAY UP FROM THE UNDERGROUND TO SPREAD THE WORD OF THEIR FILTHY DEATH METAL.

Now Wayward Dawn return with their sophomore album "Haven of Lies", set to be released via Mighty Music in April. Recorded and produced by Jacob Bredahl (Hatesphere, The Candidate) at Dead Rat Studio and mastered by Brad Boatright at Audiosiege (Obituary, Nails, Full of Hell) the nine-track long album consists of 35 minutes of gritty, primal and utterly nasty death metal.

"Haven of Lies" drags you down the deepest abyss of human depravity and assaults the listener with downtuned guitars, grimy bass, cavernous drums, and rotten growls and shrieks. The lyrical theme throughout the record centers around human tendencies during times of crisis. It questions our ability to confront reality in order to cope with the harshness of the situation, thus creating a haven of lies.

Producer Jacob Bredahl was not indifferent to the youngsters' sound. „Always a pleasure working with no-nonsense bands. Wayward Dawn delivers no bullshit old school death metal, from when daddy here was young. Three and half days was all it took these young lads to get the shit in the box. Good times“, he says.

JOHANNA WARREN

GEMINI I & II

When asked what motivates her to make music, Johanna Warren responds immediately: “Music is vibration; it’s a direct way to affect matter. A song is a way to journey into places of discord and then resolve back into harmony.” The nomadic songwriter/multi-instrumentalist constructs complex, gossamer folk compositions that draw from the richness of the human experience and her own unique flavor of mysticism. Her 2015 sophomore album, nūmūn, found its way on to several notable year end lists and led Rolling Stone Magazine to name her a “Songwriter You Need to Know.”

In 2016, Warren released Gemini I, the first of a pair of conceptually connected albums written and recorded in the throes of a rocky romantic relationship with another artist. “All the songs on both records are about a complicated three-year relationship with a Gemini man,” she says. “It was very much a ‘twin flame’ situation. We were working with bright light and intense shadow.” As a way to process this emotional chaos, Warren began to write in earnest as a form of self-therapy. Eschewing the more abstract lyricism of her earlier work, she began to create a suite of confessional songs about the blessing and the curse of romantic love.

The albums that resulted, Gemini I and Gemini II, are moody, bewitching records packed with layers of occult symbolism and personal mythology. Every song on Gemini I has a corresponding “twin” on II, linked by melodic motifs, lyrical content or production choices. Rather than the DIY recording setups that Warren and engineer/producer Bella Blasko had used previously, the Geminis were tracked at Dreamland studios in upstate New York. There, equipped with a sudden wealth of instruments and more sophisticated technology, Warren who arranges and plays nearly everything on her records, felt free to explore. This spirit of experimentation is evident on the records. The songs retain the hushed warmth of previous releases Fates and nūmūn, while expanding Warren’s sonic landscape in all directions. In celebration of her upcoming album Chaotic Good, out May 1st, Warren has partnered with Carpark and Wax Nine Records to reissue deluxe editions of Gemini I and II, including bonus tracks “The Garden” and “Maya” along with instrumental versions of the studio album.
