DESCRIPTION:

The "Pirate Metal Drinking Crew" is back to show all the filthy landlubbers what they're made of. ALESTORM's sixth long-player, Curse Of The Crystal Coconut, will be released on May 29, 2020, via Napalm Records! Eleven tracks presented in ALESTORM's typical unadulterated, chaotic fashion will pull the rug out from under your feet. Adding to that are guest performances from musical greats like Ally Storch of Subway to Sally (violin on the entire album) and Captain Yarrface of Rumahoy! A must-have, riff-laden anthem at any party, "Treasure Chest Party Quest" takes the listener onto a journey into the depths of Tortugas darkest taverns and Christopher Bowes' unique sense of humor. The smashing, lively track "Chomp Chomp", featuring vocals of Vreth of Finntröll, may make you never want to enter the open waters again, but will definitely entice you to dance along with its addictive melodies. "Pirate Metal Drinking Crew" is yet another foot-stomping anthem on the album that excels with a catchy rhythm and indelible hook. Be careful to not anger the great pirate Scurvy, or he might just unleash the Curse Of The Crystal Coconut with the brutal riffs of the "Pirate's Scorn" upon you. Whether the album makes you want to grab a fresh coconut and sip it or open up a nice bottle of beer – it will definitely lead to a wild piratical escapade. For the extra-adventurous pirates amongst you, ALESTORM will release a 2CD Mediabook with ground-breaking 16th Century interpretations of the songs. Be sure to get yours!

 TITLE: 2020
 HOMETOWN: Enschede, Netherlands
 GENRE: Rock
 PARENTAL ADVISORY STICKERED:

BIO

formed in the early 80's, the Dutch rock band Vandenberg released three quality albums during their initial run, which included their self-titled 1982 debut, 'Heading For A Storm' in '83, and 'Alibi' in '85 respectively. Subsequently, the band's leader, master guitarist Adrian Vandenberg, went on to have an impressive career outside of the group, lending his skills to Whitesnake at the height of their fame, and then the short-lived supergroup Manic Eden. More recently, Adrian has shown his cultured ability is firmly intact with Vandenberg's Moonkings, who put out two stylish albums plus an acoustic record between 2014-18. Now, Adrian has put together a dynamic new line-up for the return of Vandenberg.

"When I decided to bring the band back, I realized I was in the same position I was in the early '80s," explains Adrian. "Back then, I decided to turn Teaser, the band I was in at time, into Vandenberg. I was keen to venture away from the blues-rock idiom that I set out to do, and to find the turbo settings on my gearbox, so to speak. As I didn't want to come up with yet another new band name, it made sense to reactivate Vandenberg." To round out the roster for Vandenberg's return, Adrian brought on Ronnie Romero on vocals. He's a huge talent who's forged a formidable reputation over the past few years with the rock band Rainbow. "I needed an incredible singer to make this new step make sense and not go the predictable way of falling back on already trodden paths", explains Adrian. "Ronnie was a perfect fit. We really connected, and as soon as I knew Ronnie was on board, I wrote the songs tailored to Ronnie's amazing capabilities."

Produced by Bob Marlette (Black Sabbath, Alice Cooper, Marilyn Manson, Rob Zombie), '2020' is an album filled with melody, drive, power, and class. These 10 tracks strike a balance between musical depth and commercial impact. It's what got the band attention in the '80s, and it's what still flows with a coherent richness. "We are not at all a nostalgia act," states Adrian. For me, this album represents where we would have been had Vandenberg kept going. I couldn't be happier with the way it's turned out. I cannot wait to take this band on tour and show people what we can do live." '2020' is available May 29th through Mascot Records.

DESCRIPTION:

With metal anthems like 'Heavy Metal Breakdown', GRAVE DIGGER are one of the most influential and pioneering bands of the German heavy metal scene since the early 80s, and 2020 will celebrate the 40th anniversary of these Teutonic metal masters! The ethos of the band has not changed, and yet GRAVE DIGGER sound modern and timeless like never before. On their 20th studio album, the band around frontman Chris Boltendahl continues their epic Highlands story. Fields of Blood is the logic consequence of a legendary trilogy and an auditory battle of unique traditional metal! Drifting riff masterpieces such as the stoic "All For The Kingdom", or the epic anthem "Lions Of The Sea", promise earworm and neck muscle training, while Fields Of Blood takes us into the vastness of Scotland on a journey through explosive sound landscapes. It's no surprise that the band even recorded parts of their new longplayer in the Scottish Highlands. As a very special highlight of the album, "Thousand Tears" features the incomparable voice of Noora of Battle Beast, refining the most touching metal ballad of the year in a duet with Boltendahl! Even 40 years later, Grave Digger still stay true to their no-frills traditional brand of metal with unwavering pure steel, which nevertheless offers surprises, and celebrates such a special anniversary of one of the most successful German heavy metal pioneers in the most glorious style!

LAST CALL LIVE AT THE MUSIC BOX

“We started as teenagers with high hopes and great expectations. Our lives took different paths and the years brought each of us different experiences. One thing remained throughout, and that was friendship. That friendship has lasted over a half century!”

— Jim Bonfanti

In 2018, when Omnivore Recordings released The Choir’s first full length platter in the group’s history, no one knew what impact the release of that recording would have. Sure, the group, in its many different manifestations during the ’60s, had released several singles, including a Top 10 smash (“It’s Cold Outside”) in the group’s hometown of Cleveland. The song would reach #68 on the Billboard national charts. But the garage rock band whose many different members went on to form other important bands like Raspberries and James Gang, had never made an album of their own before, just assorted singles from 1966–1968.

So 50 years on, when the tapes of an aborted album were found, mixed and released as Artifact: The Unreleased Album to unanimous critical acclaim, the 1968 version of The Choir suddenly found itself back in the limelight with a weighty decision . . . to reclaim their vision and perform live . . . back where they came from, the home of rock ‘n’ roll, Cleveland, Ohio.

Omnivore Recordings is proud to announce the release of Last Call: Live at The Music Box, The Choir’s 50th anniversary performance captured live at Cleveland’s Music Box the night of September 20, 2019. The band plays perfect renditions of material from Artifact as well as dipping into their deep bag of influences. Hear dynamite versions of songs by Procol Harum, Billy Preston, Spooky Tooth, The Nice, The Kinks, Bob Seger and yes, even a cover of Jimmy Webb’s grandiose epic “MacArthur Park.” The band even rearranges their 1966 hit “It’s Cold Outside” to reflect the current musical makeup of the group which includes Ken Margolis (keyboards), Phil Gialombardo (organ), Randy Klawon (guitars), Denny Carleton (bass) and Jim Bonfanti (drums).

This two-disc set also include remembrances from each member of the band as well as photos from the night of the show. So, step right up and don’t be late for it’s Last Call with The Choir!

MT. JOY

Rearrange Us

Mt. Joy's star rose quickly from a bedroom project to a well-oiled machine dubbed "your new folk-rock heroes" by Rolling Stone upon the 2018 release of their self-titled debut record. That same year and beyond, millions of streams piled up month after month, and sold-out crowds sang along to every song and grew in number with every tour and festival stop they made.

Their highly anticipated sophomore album Rearrange Us is sonically rich and expansive; producer Tucker Martine, known for his work on seminal albums by My Morning Jacket and Modest Mouse, widened Mt. Joy's sound, and allows the growing sophistication of the songwriting and the arrangements to really shine. Mt. Joy is poised to be the indie breakout act of 2020.

ROLLING BLACKOUTS COASTAL FEVER SIDEWAYS TO NEW ITALY

SUB
POP

CS/LP/CS/DIGITAL

SP 1360

RELEASE DATE: JUNE 5TH, 2020

NON-EXPORTABLE
OUTSIDE OF THE US.

After years spent looking out at landscapes and loved ones and an increasingly unstable world, Rolling Blackouts Coastal Fever have turned their gaze inward, to their individual pasts and the places that inform them, on their second full-length, Sideways to New Italy.

Led by singer-songwriter-guitarists Tom Russo, Joe White and Fran Keaney, the guitar-pop five-piece returned home to Australia after the relentless touring schedule that came following their critically regarded 2018 debut Hope Downs. Feeling the literal and metaphorical ground under their feet had shifted, the band began grasping for something reliable. For Keaney, that translated into writing "pure romantic fiction" and consciously avoiding the temptation of angsty break-up songs, while Russo looked north to a "bizarre place" that captured the feeling of manufacturing a sense of home when his own had disappeared.

The New Italy of the new album's title is a village near New South Wales' Northern Rivers – the area drummer Marcel Tussie is from. A blink-and-you'll-miss-it pit-stop of a place with fewer than 200 residents, it was founded by Venetian immigrants in the late-1800s and now serves as something of a living monument to Italians' contribution to Australia, with replica Roman statues dotted like alien souvenirs on the otherwise rural landscape. The parallels to the way the band attempted to maintain connections and create familiarity during their disorienting time on the road was apparent to Russo. "These are the expressions of people trying to find a home somewhere alien: trying to create a utopia in a turbulent and imperfect world."

The record's geographic identity emerged from the band losing their grip on their own, whether that was through the pressure of touring, the dissolution of relationships, a frustrating distance from their daily lives – or some combination of all three – that came from being slingshotted all over the world, playing sold-out headline tours and festivals including Coachella, Governors Ball, Primavera Sound, All Points East, and Pitchfork Music Festival.

The notion of crafting, in Russo's words, "a utopia of where your heart's from," permeates Sideways to New Italy, in which early attempts at writing big, high-concept songs about The State of the World were abandoned in favor of love songs, and familiar voices and characters filter in and out, grounding the band's stories in their personal histories. There's something comforting, too, in knowing the next time they're buffeted from stage to stage around the world, they'll be taking the voices of their loved ones with them, building a new totem of home no matter where they end up.

ORIGINAL SOUND TRACK

THE STAPLE SINGERS

MUSIC BY CURTIS MAYFIELD

A First Artists Presentation

“LET’S DO IT AGAIN”

ALL SONGS PERFORMED BY THE STAPLE SINGERS

Grammy® Lifetime Achievement Award recipients and Rock & Roll Hall of Fame inductees, The Staple Singers are an American musical treasure.

In the '50s they were among the greatest of the post-war gospel groups. The '60s found them recording for a variety of labels like Vee-Jay, Riverside, Epic, and ultimately Stax, pioneering the “soul folk” sound. By the end of the decade, they were becoming the soul music superstars they’re most widely known as now.

During the '70s, they placed 13 singles on the U.S. Pop Chart and 20 on the U.S. R&B Chart. Besides recording, touring and chasing songs up the charts, the group also found time to not only appear in music-related motion pictures like Wattstax (1972) and The Band's The Last Waltz (1976), but they also contributed to the Sidney Poitier-directed film sound track, Let's Do It Again with music produced by Curtis Mayfield. This, their first post-Stax effort, sent the title track, “Let's Do It Again,” to the number one spot on both the Pop and R&B charts.

Though the hits slowed after the mid-'70s, they did have a number 5 dance chart hit with a cover of the Talking Heads song, “Slippery People” in 1984. Mavis Staples had been releasing solo albums dating back to 1969's self-titled effort on Stax, but started to pick up the release tempo and carry the family business forward with a pair of albums for the Paisley Park label under the direction of Prince in 1989 and 1993. She continues performing and releasing albums to this day, working with artists and producers like Ry Cooder, Jeff Tweedy, Arcade Fire, Gorillaz, and Ben Harper, among others.

Omnivore is proud to present the remastered 1975, Curtis Mayfield-produced sound track Let's Do It Again. Grammy® Lifetime Achievement Award recipients and Rock & Roll and Gospel Hall of Fame inductees, The Staple Singers are an American musical treasure. In the '50s they were among the greatest of the post-war gospel groups. The '60s found them recording for a variety of labels like Vee-Jay, Riverside, Epic, and ultimately Stax, pioneering the "soul folk" sound. By the end of the decade, they were becoming the soul music superstars they're most widely known as now.

During the '70s, they placed 13 singles on the U.S. Pop Chart and 20 on the U.S. R&B Chart. Besides recording, touring and chasing songs up the charts, the group also found time to not only appear in music-related motion pictures like Wattstax (1972) and The Band's The Last Waltz (1976), but they also contributed to the Sidney Poitier-directed film soundtrack, Let's Do It Again with music produced by Curtis Mayfield. This, their first post-Stax effort, sent the title track, "Let's Do It Again," to the number one spot on both the Pop and R&B charts.

Though the hits slowed after the mid-'70s, they did have a number 5 dance chart hit with a cover of the Talking Heads song, "Slippery People" in 1984. Mavis Staples had been releasing solo albums dating back to 1969's self-titled effort on Stax, but started to pick up the release tempo and carry the family business forward with a pair of albums for the Paisley Park label under the direction of Prince in 1989 and 1993. She continues performing and releasing albums to this day, working with artists and producers like Ry Cooder, Jeff Tweedy, Arcade Fire, Gorillaz, and Ben Harper, among others.

Omnivore is proud to present the remastered 1976 Curtis Mayfield-produced Pass It On. The new edition feature liner notes from Grammy®-Award winning author, Rob Bowman and all single edits as bonus tracks. This reissue is produced and remastered by Grammy®-winners, Cheryl Pawelski and Michael Graves respectively, and includes photos and ephemera in the booklet.

MAKE THEM SUFFER

HOW TO SURVIVE A FUNERAL

SUMMARY

Growth, and the desire for eternal forward motion have been the concepts that have defined Make Them Suffer since the very beginning; and have been the foundations that led them from the world's most remote capital city Perth in Australia, to performing on stages around the world. As they have traversed previous eras, the five-piece have grown through the genres of deathcore, melodic death metal, & heavy metalcore; and as they continue on this path, look to be defined by nothing more than the label 'creative'. Through 'Ether', '27', and 'Hollowed Heart', the band has worked to shed themselves of the shackles of expectation, and as they look towards the open road that lies ahead of them, the light that guides the way has a name, 'How To Survive A Funeral'.

To assist in the redefinition of every line the band is known for, Make Them Suffer enlisted the assistance of Drew Fulk A.K.A. WZRDBLD, who has worked with everyone from Motionless In White & Bullet For My Valentine, to Yelawolf & Lil' Wayne. The band travelled to LA to shack up at Fulk's studio, the first time in their career working this closely with a producer, and the result is truly something unique in the current climate of heavy music. The band's fourth full length sees inspirations from their past and present sounds twisted together into a package that will define Make Them Suffer's place amongst their contemporaries as a truly creative act.
