Discription:

There is great power in secrecy. Detached from the world, brewed under a strict code of confidentiality, a new lifeform came into existence. Led by none other than Sonata Arctica frontman Tony Kakko, this new beast of his gained momentum in the massive shadow of his wildly successful power metal superheroes, slowly, steadily, biding its time, waiting for the right moment.

This moment is now:

With his self-titled debut, Tony Kakko opens the curtains into this strange new world of his just enough to take a first peek – and instantly hunger for more. A master story teller and a wizard of conjuring musical emotions, Himmelkraft stages Kakkos trademark talents in a wholly new, unexpected and thrilling way.

To him, the sky truly is the limit, bestowing upon us an album that sounds like nothing else out there – brooding and dark, menacing and eerie, stomping and monumental.

This project sees Tony Kakko enter a fascinating new era. Much like the legendary Elven smiths of old, forging away in solemn silence, Kakko has stopped the wheel of time to reinvent himself and his bold musical vision. Shrouded in mystery, a new being appears in the fog, barely discernible and yet distinct the very moment Tony Kakko starts to sing. Yet, everything else remains just what it was from the very start – a mystery. Call them songs for a dying world or songs for a world reborn – either way, you will be intrigued how this extraordinary project will develop. And that's a promise.

Chewing The Fat marks the start of a new era for Franc Moody. It's a deep dive into the recesses of the duo's creative nooks and crannies, a tearing up of the rulebook, and a reinvention of the Franc Moody sound that shows a more mature side than their previous offerings.

Recorded in part at the LA 64 Sounds Studio and at Damon Albarn's Studio 13 in West London, the sonics of the album are heavily influenced by Albarn's synth collection (in particular a few of the Russian models lying around), as well as live shows by Massive Attack and LCD Soundsystem, making this an offering with perhaps a little less disco, but with a sense of grunge, grit, and attitude.

ANNIE DIRUSSO

SUPER PEDESTRIAN

Annie DiRusso is a Nashville based indie-rock artist born in NYC, who wears the influence of both of these cities on her sleeve. Blending buzzing garage rock guitars and high-energy performances with a pop-infused flair, the magic she creates in her hooks and melodies is apparent in her new debut album, Super Pedestrian, out March 7.

The 23-year-old pop-rock singer and guitarist had been living on the road with her dynamic band for two and a half years, and has made quite a mark on the touring world since the launch of her career amidst the pandemic, supporting artists like HAIM, Samia, Declan McKenna, Briston Maroney, beabadoobee, Djo, Peach Pit & more, debuting her EP on The Late Show with Stephen Colbert, and having a song go viral. She has quickly turned casual listeners into hardcore fans with V Magazine noting she's "single handedly bringing back that raging rock sound" and Alt Press stating, "she's set to skyrocket."

A year later, that spirit of joyful abandon infuses her entire debut album. "Writing has never come super easily for me. In the past, I'd write like five or six songs a year—which is not that many," she points out with a smile. "I was just trying to follow ideas as they came and not limit myself. I just kind of let things live at the same time. It was like swimming in the world of all of these different songs at once."

In 1980, Art was 54; his health was poor, but his creativity was at its peak. So was his ambition. He was touring Europe for the first time. He'd brought his own band, his own tunes. He was determined to astound the world.

—Laurie Pepper (from her liner notes)

At the time of this recording in 1980, Art Pepper had been a mainstay in the world of jazz for nearly four decades. Starting out as a young player in his teens, he accompanied acclaimed artists Benny Carter and Stan Kenton. From there, his collaborators read like a who's who list of 20th century greats. His solo career, however, was legendary. It's impossible to talk jazz saxophone without the name Art Pepper in the mix. Through his life, troubled as it may have been, one thing was always a constant—his music.

As evidenced by 2023's acclaimed The Complete Maiden Voyage Recordings, a 7-CD testament to his effortless playing recorded months before his passing, Art Pepper never disappointed, instead, he thrilled and beguiled audiences around the world.

Geneva 1980 collects 10 performances recorded July 5, 1980 at the New Morning in Geneva, Switzerland. Backing Art on alto saxophone were Milcho Leviev on piano, Tony Dumas on bass, and Carl Burnett on drums. A set of almost all originals left the crowd astounded.

Art was so exhilarated by their rowdy, ravenous appreciation, he was at his very best. As was the band. The band was tight. All the tunes are great. This version of "Patricia" might just be the best on record. I'll swear this is the hottest version of "Miss Who" he ever played.

—Laurie Pepper (from her liner notes)

Available as a double-CD, and Digitally, Geneva 1980 shows that Art Pepper never stopped creating, performing, entertaining, and solidifying his place as one of the jazz greats. Hear why.

ANTHONY KRIZAN

COOL SHADE OF BLUE

For Fans of, Spin Doctors, Dirty Honey, and Blues Rock!

Anthony Krizan's rock roots run deep. He was lead guitarist of the Spin Doctors, opening 15 dates for the Rolling Stones with audiences of 70,000, and for the Allman Brothers. He played guitar with Jimi Hendrix's legendary bassist, Noel Redding. Anthony is known for rocking the big stages and getting an audience on their feet. He's an original member of Amphibian, with Phish lyricist Tom Marshall.

Anthony has also penned rock/soul staples such as "Stand By My Woman" with Lenny Kravitz, 5 songs on the Spin Doctors Greatest Hits, the theme of the Spin City TV series and The Howard Stern "Miss America" theme. Recently, Krizan co-wrote the title track to British rock singer John Waite's new 2022 EP, Anything, and produced 3 tracks on the release. He also co-wrote the title track to John Waite's Mercury release When You Were Mine.

But Anthony's true passion lies in his solo work. The Anthony Krizan Band's performances and songs are electrifying, a swampy, rock/blues/soul, genre crossing solo-coaster ride. His previous album Dust and Bone had the title track "Dust and Bone" covered by Gretchen Wilson and Pat Travers. Now he is set to release the follow up Cool Shade of Blue featuring the first Hendrix infused single "White Lines".
